No Delay in Canal Legislation. Before the Panama proposal should be permitted to impede in the slightest degree the course of canal legislation its terms should be made explicit in other respects than the matter of price. The canal commission's report is far from saying that if the price were made acceptable it would favor the Panama route. It compared in detail the merits and demerits of the two projects before deciding in favor of Nicaragua, and finally refused to consider seriously the Panama proposal on account of the prohibitive price that was asked. The only inference to be derived from the report is that if the price asked by the Panama company had been reasonable serious consideration would have been given to the chances of removing the other objections to the Panama proposal, and the vote would probably not have been unanimous for Nicaragua. The decision in favor of Nicaragua was expressly made in consideration of "all the facts developed by the investigations made by the commission," as well as in view of "the terms offered by the new Panama Canal Com-

The report indicates that on account of the engineering difficulties of the Bohio dam and the Culebra cut a longer time would probably be taken to complete the canal under the Panama than under the Nicaraguan proposal. If it is not to be used for the purposes of delay and deadlock with resulting inaction, its advocates should promptly demonstrate good faith by refraining from suggestions of postponement and further investigation and by bringing Colombia squarely and immediately to the mark with a definite statement of its policy and purposes

The Hepburn bill should be passed by the House without delay. This action will cause the Panama company "to step lively" and Colombia to declare itself at once. Then if Colombia outbids Nicaragua and Costa Rica, the Senate can, if it will, substitute Panama for Nicaragua in the bill, and conference will give us one or the other of the routes. There are some, it is to be remembered, who would have the United States lose both canals, like the ass in the fable between the two bunches of hay.

In tariff legislation for the Philippines

there are four essential ends to be attained. First, a tariff on imports into the Philippines, so framed as to protect the industries of the islands and to raise the necessary revenues and carefully adapted to the archipelago's practical conditions and needs. This tariff is to be substituted for the Dingley schedules which possibly even now apply to such importations into the Second, a tariff upon importations into the United States from the Philippines which will give to the products of the archipelago all of the concessions in a reduction of duties which can safely and wisely be granted. Third, the payment into riority of the white race in the south must be maintained. Any one who has seen the the insular treasury for the benefit of the archipelago of all the duties collected, south under the rule of the other color, as it was directly after the war, can underwhether on importations from the Philipstand why this must be so. pines into the United States or upon importations into the Philippines from all the Joseph Wheeler in a report of a recent interview. General Wheeler is more of a world. Fourth, in view of the fact that the Dingley schedules possibly apply misfit and oppressive duties to importations into the Philippines, and that free trade, injurious to American interests, undoubtedly prevails in respect to importations into the United States from the islands, it is abso-

General Wheeler's reference of course was to local financial stability. But what a record the white supremacy of the south has on the subject of the national financial stability! Mr. Bryan leaned upon the south in both of his campaigns. She gave him the majority of the votes he received in the electoral college. She was in the main the od before the recent decision of the menace to the national credit. Had it been do about it.

possible for the Nebraska leader to make such headway elsewhere as he made in the south, free silver would have carried at the polls, and the financial stability of this country would have been temperarily destroyed. The Bryanite machine carried everything before it in the south. And yet there were voters at hand sufficient in number to have turned the scale in favor of sound money and the country's prosperity. They were citizens of the United States, and qualified for the suffrage under the Constitution of the United States. But they were not permitted to exercise their constitutional right. They were barred from the polls on the allegation that they were unable to understand the questions at issue, and therefore unworthy of a voice in their settlement.

We have then this extraordinary case to consider. The white supremacy of the south, under machine domination, standing arrayed against the public credit; with the rejected negro vote standing ready, under local and native leadership, to save the day for sound finance, and only asking the right to exercise a constitutional privilege. If anything more remarkable than this is to be found in our political history it is not visible to the naked eye.

Back in Pekin.

The return of the Chinese court to Pekin, which occurs today, is an event of wide impertance to the celestial empire. It signifles a willingness on the part of the rulers of China to accept the conditions stipulated by the powers upon the suspension of hostilities, and it is an ostensible recognition of the duty on the part of China to establish reforms which will prevent a recurrence of the dangers to foreign life and trade in China. At one time the court, it was feared, would not return to Pekin. In the first flush of Chinese resentment at the intrusion of the powers and the violation of the sacred precincts of the inner courts of the imperial city, the determination to remain in the inaccessible mountain capital was announced, in terms which gave rise to fears lest China was resolved to withdraw once more into her shell of conservatism and exclusiveness. But the influence of the foreign representatives at Pekin eventually prevailed to persuade the Chinese officials that their wisest course lay in seeking to restore the conditions at Pekin, and to accept the inevitable injunctions of the powers to preserve a pacific, if not a progressive, attitude toward the rest of the Champ Clark is said to be talking "im perialism" in the remote rural districts of Missouri. Mr. Clark should proceed with caution. Missourians are an unassuming and fair minded people. They are willing to be shown things. But they are also positive in their convictions and are likely to become indignant if they suspect that they have been trifled with; that they have been persuaded to tremble at "imperialism" when in fact there isn't any such thing.
